BELLE VUE GARDENS,

(BY KIND PERMISSION)

AUGUST 2ND, 1903, AT 11 A.M.

MARCH "Cornelius" Mendelssohn.

OVERTURE..... "Light Cavalry" Suppé.

DUET "See the Land appears in sight" Glover.
MISS MACK and MR DAWSON.

Blow ye fresh'ning breezes blow
See the land appears in sight,
Lightly o'er the waves we go;
We shall reach the shore to-night.

Sunset with its gorgeous glowing,
Pours its flood of mellow light
On the waves so gently, gently flowing,
And the the land, the land that's now
in sight.

Blow, ye fresh'ning breezes blow,
See the land appears in sight.

Onward, onward, we are flying
Merrily now before the wind.
Light our hearts, yet we are sighing
For the land we leave behind.

From yon land of magic beauty
We no more shall long to roam,
There we'll nobly do our duty,
It will be our future home.

Hope each anxious fear is stilling,
Now all dangers we have passed,
Joy each bounding heart is filling,
We have reached the land at last.

SELECTION..... "Lucia di Lammermoor" Donizetti.

AIR..... "The Land across the Sea" Barnard.
MISS MACK.

I had a message from a land across the sea,
A message true and tender, that spoke in my dreams to me.
Flower in the woodside, and everywhere 'tis May,
When are you coming home, it seemed to say,
Though Spring is here again, though skies are blue.
Hearts in the old, old home, weary for you.

Waves that murmur and winds that roam,
Bear me over the sea,
Back to the land my heart calls home,
Where they remember me.
Land, my land across the sea
Home that my dreams restore,
Oh! how I long to-night to be, home once more.

Last night I had a dream, I crossed the mighty main,
I stood among the dear ones, that love me of old again.
There in my home of yore, each well loved one I met,
Weeping I woke, and knew they loved me yet.
Though far away to-night, over the sea,
Those whom I long to meet still think of me.
Winds that murmur, &c.

SUITE..... "Egyptian" Luigini.

AIR "Hear the wild winds blow" Mattei.
MR. SYDNEY DAWSON.

Dark are the clouds that now darken the sea,
And my brave barque is flying before the fierce gale;
Her heart seems to throb at the waves on her lee,
And scorn the fierce gusts that are rending each sail.

Oh! oh! hear the wild winds blow!
Oh! oh! swifter she will go!
Oh! oh! hear the wild winds blow!
Santa Maria—On bended knee
Lowly I kneel, have mercy on me;
Quell this fierce wind and calm the wild sea.
And calm the wild sea. Hear it blow!
On, on my barque, dash through the foam,
Laugh at the wind, we're nearly home,
Oh, those bright eyes awaiting me there;
On, on my barque, the Storm King we'll dare.

In the dark night as I pace the lone deck,
And watch the storm rise that my brave barque may wreck;
The spirit of love seems to guard me and say:
In danger and storm to the Virgin you'll pray.
Oh! oh! hear the wild winds blow, &c.
