Mr. J. Gregory

(a) "IN A STRANGE LAND."

FROM my homeland far, 'neath the sunset red,
 The clouds hurry high in air;
 Ah, my father and mother, so dear, are dead,
 And I am forgotten there, I am forgotten there.

How soon, ah, how soon will the dawn appear,
 When rest shall be mine, and o'er me will sigh
 Soft zephyrs from wood and mere,
 And none will remember me here, none remember me here.

(b) "TRUE LOVE."

CAST away, cast away thy grief, my child

In the heart of the mighty sea!
 A stone will lie in the silent deeps,
 My grief returns unto me;
 And the love that in thy heart doth bide,
 As a flower, let it fade away!"

" Ah, the rose will fall when summer dies,
 But my love will live for aye,
 And thy troth, dearest child, so lightly giv'n,
 Let it fly with the winds and rain."

" Ah, mother, though rent are the rocks by the blast,
 Ever true will my troth remain,
 My love will true remain."
